DENTISTRY.—Mr V C Mallan still maintains his reputation for practical and skilful work in a profession which has been followed by members of the family in London since the early days of this century. Everything that art and skill can do to supply the loss of natural teeth is done by expert hands, and at a moderate cost. In "The Atlas" (newspaper) of Sunday, June 8th, 1828, there is an announcement that Mr Mallan, Surgeon Dentist, patronised by the King of France and the Royal Family, had, in consequence of his success among the English visitors at Paris, established himself in London

Case No.....

I hereby guarantee that the Teeth supplied to M..... are composed of chemically pure materials which will not corrode in the mouth, change colour nor decay. Should the Teeth require any attention, I shall be pleased to see you at any time and do what may be required, free of charge.

Mr. V. C. MALLAN takes this opportunity of notifying that all artificial teeth supplied receive his personal attention and supervision before they are placed in the mouth, therefore patients can rely upon receiving the full benefits of all the latest improvements in Painless Dentistry.

The Reason Why

PEOPLE often wonder why they suffer with Headache, Lowness of Spirits, Wind, Sleeplessness, Pains in the Back, and a thousand other ailments. In a few words, these complaints in nine cases out of ten arise from defective mastication, causing indigestion.

Now, does it not stand to reason that a good set of Teeth must assist mastication and digestion, and when considered, the small cost incurred in procuring the same, no one need wonder that Doctors recommend their patients to consult a Dentist, especially when the most nervous can rely upon a Single Tooth to a complete Set being fitted without pain, the extraction of stumps not always being necessary.

Mr. V. C. MALLAN

has been consulted by many patients who have been unfortunate and had teeth made which they have been unable to wear owing to bad fitting or too much bulk in the mouth. Mr. Mallan will supply teeth to anyone so placed, and will give a written undertaking to make no charge if satisfaction is not assured. Surely this is worth a trial to those who wish for teeth but are under the impression they cannot wear them.

CAUTION !

Never, under any circumstances, allow strangers or ignorant commission agents travelling from door to door to interfere with your teeth. Apart from the dreadful ignorance of men who, under all kinds of pretences, force cheap factory-made teeth upon the public, there is also the

of allowing unknown strangers to attempt work they probably know nothing about, with disease-laden appliances carried in a handbag. The perfect sterilizing and extreme care necessary is not possible to men travelling from house to house. Such important work should be done in a place completely equipped for the purpose.

Just ask yourself this question.

Would a respectable and competent dental practitioner canvas down areas and call upon shopkeepers and at private houses for orders for dentistry? There can only be one answer,

NO !

Therefore do not for one moment entertain the idea of being talked over by such people, but avoid all risks by having nothing to do with them.
